7 The IAFP's Research Day Committee currently consists of four IAFP members from residency
8 programs across the state. Additional faculty and Academy leaders assist with abstract judging and the 9 judging of live presentations on Research Day. The committee has been active in its email group and 10 on several Zoom calls during the planning stages for 2023's event.
11

12 The 2023 IAFP Research Day took place on Thursday, May 18 at the Ritz Charles event center in 13 Carmel, with about 100 family medicine residents, residency program faculty, practicing FPs, and 14 ancillary staff in attendance. For this event, we received an unprecedented total of 62 abstracts from 11
15 residency programs across the state. This continues the recent trend of submitted abstract numbers
16 increasing yearly.
17

18 For the first time this year, the event featured two concurrent tracks of presentations - one for 19 Performance Improvement/Original Research and one for Case Presentations. In addition to the usual 20 mixture of original research presentations, case presentations, and posters, the event featured the 21 third annual Leadership Development Seminar that was planned and supported by leaders from the 22 IAFP Foundation including Jason Marker, MD, and our committee chair, Jerry Morris, MD. We plan to 23 continue the Leadership Development Seminar at future Research Days. $1,800 in prize money was 24 distributed at the end of the day.

26 In the coming months the Committee will plan 2024's event. With the necessary adjustments, we will 27 plan to continue with the dual track agenda to allow more residents to present their research.

29 Respectfully submitted,
