Featuring Keynote Speaker

Daniel J. Friesen

"The Greatest State"

Leaders are learners. Leaders are influencers. Leaders are creators. Some seem to perform these roles better than others.

What is the one particular behavior that predicts that a leader will lead at the highest possible level? Further, what is the specific state of mind that invokes that particular behavior? Is it possible to stack the leadership deck in your favor?

Dan Friesen has spent his 29-year career in the trades as technician, sales person, manager and owner in the PHCE industry. 17 of those years were spent training for Nexstar, visiting PHCE shops around North America elevating the personal and professional performance of the people that make those companies work. He is the president of Charlton & Hill Home Services, the VP of Training for P1 Service Group, and an accomplished and compelling leadership development speaker.

Dan will walk us through some of the specific brain science, mindset, and behaviors that result in the greatest state of mind a leader can possess to elevate their leadership performance.

Opening Speaker
