Night to Shine Pajama Party

Night to Shine is an prom-night experience which is organized annually by the Tim Tebow Foundation. The foundation works with churches around the world to host proms for individuals with disabilities, ages 14 and older.

This annual event is highly anticipated by many of Tangram's clients, but this year, the event looked a little different due to COVID-19. Instead of proms, there were drive-thru red carpets and a virtual program.

When Olivia learned that her clients, Kim and Elizabeth, wanted to participate, she knew she'd have to get creative to make it an unforgettable experience!

Kim and Elizabeth celebrate being Prom Queens

Olivia took Kim and Elizabeth to the drive-thru red carpet at Mount Pleasant Christian Church, where they picked up their goody boxes ahead of the event. The boxes contained candy, balloons, a handwritten note, and a crown, so they could be prom queens. The trio then decided they would have a pajama party for Night to Shine.

Olivia planned a special night, which included crafts, dancing, and board games. They also watched the virtual program, which included Tim Tebow and other celebrities addressing all the participants. Olivia brought a Polaroid camera so they could have fun taking instant photos as well!

Judging by the photos, it looks like these three prom queens had a very memorable evening and made the best of some unique circumstances. "We had tons of laughter, singing, and dancing!" Olivia confirmed.

Innovative team members like Olivia make all the difference for those we serve by using their talents to craft positive experiences for the people we serve!
