Thumbs Up! Jason Lands a New Job with the Help of Tangram's Employment Services

Sometimes, having the right people in your corner makes all the difference. This is something Jason learned when he met Scott McGuire, his Tangram Employment Consultant, after an unsuccessful 18 months of job searching.

Jason, who had been searching for a job for a long time, was losing motivation when he started working with Scott.

"He and I had great rapport right off the bat," remembered Scott.

Jason is all smiles at his new job!

They started with the discovery process, which is an exercise intended to highlight potential career paths. With Jason's past experience, a couple of options floated to the top: janitorial and grocery.

Scott and Jason visited a few different businesses to see about job openings, one of which was a YMCA. Jason completed a job shadow at one of the YMCA branches and found that it was a great fit. The YMCA employees were supportive and enthusiastic, so much so that they recommended Jason to other YMCA branches since there was not an open position at that branch. Luckily, the Fort Benjamin Harrison YMCA had an opening on their janitorial team and invited him for an interview. Following the interview, they offered him a job.

"It's a really nice process. I love the [job search] process we do because we really try to find the right fit. We want the job to be long term," Scott explained.

Jason started his new job in April and is still going strong. He works Monday-Thursday, four hours per day and loves it. He is excited to have a steady income, which will help him achieve some of his personal goals. "He wants to move to a different place, so I think this will help him gain his independence. I have really enjoyed working with him. He's been a dream client," said Scott.

Congratulations, Jason, and keep up the good work!
