A Day at Navy Pier

Sometimes you need a day to yourself. Michelle lives with a roommate and doesn't often have the opportunity to do things on her own. So, when she started planning a getaway this summer, her team knew they would have to do something extraordinary to make it happen.

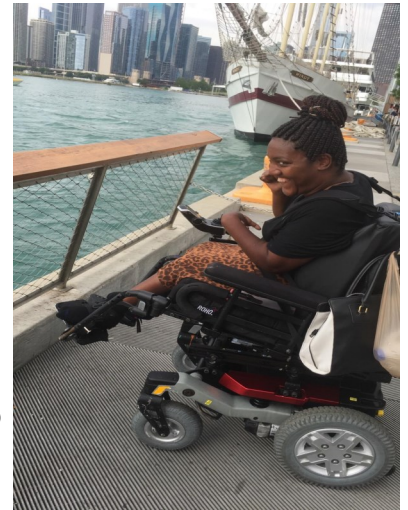

Due to state regulations, her destination needed to be somewhere close enough so that she could travel there and back within a 24 hour window. Though she had originally hoped to go to Atlanta, she knew that wouldn't be feasible. So, she chose Navy Pier.

But there was one more hurdle—finding someone to take her to Navy Pier. That's where Eve Tumay came in. Eve volunteered to work on her day off so that Michelle's dream of a special day-trip could come true.

Eve has worked with Michelle for about 4 years, and they have a special friendship, which is why Eve decided to give up her day off so Michelle could enjoy a trip to Chicago.

Michelle and Eve had a great time in Chicago. They spent the entire day at Navy Pier where they watched boats, talked to people, visited shops, and sampled different foods.
