THE COMMUNITY FOUNDATION
of Muncie & Delaware County, Inc.

Where neighbors create legacies

LET'S TALK

Robert Fulghum coined the phrase, "All I really need to know I learned in kindergarten" when he wrote the book of the same name. There is some truth to that. Share, play fair, hold hands and stick together – these are a few of Fulghum's kindergarten lessons. Learning how to learn is another.

Our grant making is focused in five areas: arts and culture, community betterment, economic development, education, and human services. Supporting education creates a community culture of lifelong learning and improves the quality of life in Muncie and Delaware County.

In this issue of Legacy, we focus on some of the Foundation's education initiatives. Our scholarship program supports high school seniors and college students as they work to achieve their educational goals. The Robert P. Bell Education Grants program supports teachers as they develop creative and innovative classroom projects that engage students. BY5 is a supporting organization of the Foundation. Through its work, Muncie and Delaware County is seeing improved opportunities for children to reach their developmental potential. In addition, grants made into the community support facilities of learning from early childhood through senior citizens.

Let's keep learning together and improve Delaware County today, tomorrow, and always.

Kelly K. Shrock, President

COMMUNITY IMPROVED BY COLLABORATION

Revitalized homes. Cleaner streets. Pocket parks. Community gardens. Job opportunities. Preschool. Neighbors helping neighbors.

These are qualities we all want in our neighborhoods. A group of residents, nonprofits, and businesses in the South Central and Thomas Park/Avondale area are working to ensure their neighborhoods have them.

With input and support of residents, nonprofit organizations, and businesses, the 8 Twelve Coalition works to revitalize the Thomas Park/Avondale and South Central neighborhoods.

Over the last several decades these neighborhoods have experienced a period of disinvestment. With the closing of the Chevrolet plant and the loss of other jobs in the area, people moved away or lost their homes. Homes sat vacant. Crime persisted. It became a difficult place to live.

But the story doesn't end there. Residents, nonprofits, and businesses in South Central and Thomas Park/Avondale shared a common goal: to revitalize the neighborhoods. The 8 Twelve Coalition was created. Spearheaded by Muncie Habitat for Humanity and Vectren Foundation, a plan was developed. The plan focuses on improving housing, beautification, and supporting local businesses in a target area bordered by 8th Street, Memorial Drive (aka 12th Street), Perkins Avenue, and Madison Street.

“When organizations, residents, and funders come together collaboratively to work to improve quality of place in one specific area, change happens,” says Lindsey Arthur, CEO of Muncie Habitat for Humanity. “Residents began to create a new story. A story that is transformative. The work will truly have an impact in this area, but in the whole of Muncie as well.”

Neighborhood revitalization starts with the identification of community strengths and building those up to overcome challenges. Represented in the 8 Twelve area, or just outside, are organizations like Ross Community Center, Muncie Mission, Boys and Girls Club, Urban Light Christian Development Corporation, Maring Hunt Library, Habitat for Humanity, South View Elementary, Inspire Academy, the Unity Center, and many community churches.

Last year alone, over half a million dollars was invested in the 8 Twelve target area. Funding came from national and regional funders like the Vectren Foundation and Lowes, and local funders like Ball Brothers Foundation and The Community Foundation. Funds from The Community Foundation have been used to improve housing and beautify the neighborhood. Habitat for Humanity received $50,000 in 2016 and 2017 to support home rehabilitation, repairs, and new construction. Many of their projects target properties in the 8 Twelve area. EcoREHAB of Muncie received $30,000 to rehabilitate a home in the 8 Twelve area following green and sustainable building practices. Urban Light CDC used a $24,000 grant to rehabilitate a home in the South Central neighborhood. These homes provide home-ownership opportunities for members of the community.

Additionally, funding for quality services will continue to enhance the neighborhoods. Ross Community Center, located in the heart of Thomas Park/Avondale, had been a place of stability for young people in the neighborhood for years. Many factors, such as neighborhood decline, limited funding, and changing staff, left Ross Center struggling to provide that community stability. With a strong board and new leadership in place, Ross Community Center is beginning an exciting new stage in their life as a community center for people of all ages.

A $20,000 grant from The Community Foundation supported a new violence prevention and community reconciliation program that includes art, music, theatre, sports, and community gardening. These programs are designed to strengthen communication and collaboration among community members and empower people to take charge of their own lives. Ross Community Center also provides a preschool for young children, educational and recreational afterschool programs, reading programs, clubs and summer programs for young people, bingo and euchre for seniors, and programs for everyone in between.

United Day Care Center received $5,638 to provide quality early childhood education and kindergarten readiness for at-risk children at United Day Care Center, Huffer Children's Center and BSU Child Study Center. This collaboration captures matching funds from the state of Indiana.

WIPB-TV received $3,000 to grow the Be My Neighbor Day event focused on the importance of being a good neighbor and making a connection to PBS educational program for families and children.

The work of the coalition impacts a variety of organizations that touch the lives of many community members.

It's clear to see that together residents, nonprofits, and businesses are making a difference.
