To whom it may concern:

Elevatus Architecture (formerly SchenkelShultz Fort Wayne) strongly recommends Pauly Jail Building Company, a premier correctional facilities contractor in the United States. Our firm has had the distinct pleasure of working with Pauly Jail since our first corrections project together back in 1986.

Our most recent project in Adams County, Indiana completed in 2016, was a success due to our entire team coming together for the betterment of the county jail and the Sheriff's department. With their knowledgeable team of Jared Bailey and Nick Henry by our side, our team was able to provide immediate results to the most pressing safety and security issues. We have relied on Pauly Jail Building Company's expertise many times before and their performance has never faltered. Their team is responsive and consistently provided us with efficient and creative solutions to the special challenges that Adams County faced during the design and construction phases of the project.

I would recommend Pauly Jail Building Company to other clients and counties without hesitation. It has been a pleasure working with them.

Sincerely,

ELEVATUS Architecture
