

Investing with emotions can be costly

When times are tough, we want to limit our losses. When things are going well, we wish we had invested more. We all fear missing out.

But when you're investing, giving in to fear is often a losing strategy. More often than not, investors with this mindset tend to buy high and sell low as they invest more in a rising market and pull money out in a falling market.

Riding the ups and downs of the market

Keep your emotions in check

Investors who have followed their emotions, joining the crowd of other emotional investors, have historically regretted it. Periods that followed investors cashing out of the market have provided above-average returns, while periods that followed investors adding to the market have provided below-average returns.
